ONE LIFE TAKEN ON ACCOUNT OF STRIKE

SPECIAL OFFICER T. J. PIPES IS SHOT TO DEATH AT HOUSTON SHOP YARDS

Houston, Tex., Oct. 1.—Which brings to the fore the first fatality in the Houston steel strike today is a disputed question exactly by the men who were injured in the work strikes at the gates of the Southern Pacific shop yards early today.

The police claim that they were unable to see who fired the shots from which the men were injured. A police special officer from Albany, Texas, was killed today in the gate of the shop yards while carrying with a small party of officers and strike leaders to a high in the yard.

S. B. Crockett, another special officer of the party who was injured, and who was wounded says the shot was fired from within the yard, where a number of guards were stationed.

Another story told Captain H. S. Hall, also injured, who was leading the party to the yards says the shots came from the crowd of strikers following in charge, and that he believes he fired the shot from the yard.

A third version developed today in the street. It is the one of the company employ that the shot was fired from the yard, and that the strikers were the ones who fired the shot.

It is said that the shots came from a rifle. Captain H. S. Hall says that the shots were not making threats, but were trying to get the strikers out of the place.

In addition to those shot in a stoned Gordon knight strike, a man was stabbed in the face. All of the injured are expected to recover today. Shop yards with an increased in the company's guards watching over them were a normal at most Dothan quietness.

VENET'S HOLD MAY BE TOP OF LONGSHOREMAN

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 1.—It is believed that Alfred Stiles, a longshoreman, is confined in the hold of the steamship Pathan on his way to Liverpool with a cargo of cotton. It is thought that the fate of Stiles is problematical, but it is believed his body will be found when the cargo of cotton is unloaded at the English port.

The Pathan sailed from Savannah Saturday at midnight and was being loaded from lighters, even while it was being towed down the river. At the bar the lighters were being pushed over the big steamers' side to the lighters, and they did. When the men were in the ship Stiles was advising.

It is believed that Stiles was in the hold of the ship on a job of cotton in the hold. The ship was being towed down the river.

Stiles still advises. There is no word from the Pathan and the probability of Stiles could not be communicated to the vessel. It is not believed that when he wakes he could have made sufficient noise to attract attention of those on deck in which event his body will be found when the cotton is unloaded.

What are you going to do about it? If you who are right into your conversation business, or otherwise and pinned with that look that plenty says. Well, I'm here. Cut out that little and attend to your business. Don't you see me?

MIGHT BE MISTAKEN.

Once Forced the Admission From a Man Who Knew It All.

The man who knows it all is rarely popular. According to an anecdote of Alexandre Dumas, that generous romancer once balked at contributing to a fund for the relief of such a person, a fellow author fallen into indigence in his old age.

"I refuse!" he cried angrily at the collector who had approached him as he sat with a group of literary friends. "Doubly, trebly, continuously and eternally, I refuse! That man is beyond my patience."

At once his companions took up the theme, and anecdote after anecdote was related of the man's egotistic and disagreeable traits.

"If he were ever known to admit an error himself," the last speaker concluded, "one might forgive him, but to be always right and to know everything—it is too much. Show me that he has once excused a mistake in another or owned to one himself and I will subscribe to your fund, but that is something nobody can do."

"On the contrary, it is something I can do," cried Dumas unexpectedly, by his good humor quite restored by his little outburst. "Listen, Ours, from an inn where we were last staying together in France, I saw a fellow walk in the night. I saw something of myologie, he does not, but he thinks he does. Presently we find a large, thick, white, cellular fungus. It is new to both of us, but I recognize it and choose to remark—here, as you know, a better cook than author—that it is a pity, since there is simply enough for a meal and it looks appetizing, that it is not, after all, edible."

"But, my faith, Monsieur Dumas, it is edible!" he cried, and he proceeds to argue. I do not argue. I gather the thing into my silk handkerchief, and when at length he pauses for my rejoinder I say simply that I will accept his word for it, and as soon as we return to the inn, where I am excellent friends with the cook, I will go into the kitchen, steal the thing myself, pour over it a little sauce of which I have the secret, which is indeed a dream, and it shall be our first course for luncheon. Doubtless it will be delicious, and if we die the responsibility will be none of mine."

"For the rest of the walk he is silent. At the door of the inn he is pale. At the threshold of the kitchen he clears his throat as if to speak. When the cook offers me a steaming he gasps. When I drop the specimen into it he says to me, low but quite distinctly, 'Monsieur, let us omit that first course, it is possible I was mistaken.'

"You see, gentlemen, we subscribe to this fund for the longer preservation in life of an indifferent mycologist."—Youth's Companion.

Breathing Machinery.

A writer on engineering subjects calls attention to the fact that a piece of machinery, such as a motor, put aside after being used, is in danger of internal rusting through a kind of respiration which affects cylinders, gear boxes, clutch chambers, interferences in ball bearings, and so forth. Every enclosed air space "breathes" by drawing in air when a fall of temperature contracts its walls and expelling it when the walls expand through heat. The moisture introduced with the air is deposited in the cavities and may produce serious damage through rust.

Meat in Gorma.

In Burma, India, all meat must be eaten on the day it is killed. This is due to the very small number of refrigerators in use and to the small supply of ice. As there are no meat markets, like those one is accustomed to see in our cities and towns, the meat, fish and fowl are sold at a bazaar or booth, where the fowls are sold alive, to be killed when needed. Machine made ice is the only kind obtainable there and is sold only in small quantities.

Jack and Jill.

Jack and Jill had made their trip up and down the hill, with the result already recorded in the juvenile chronicles of the day.

Presently Jack sat up and rubbed his cracked crown.

"How did I get this fearful head?" he groaned.

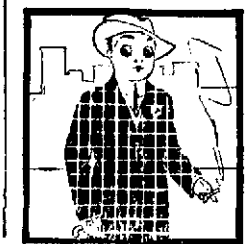

"Oh, nothing stronger than a pall of water," soothingly answered Jill. Then Jack tumbled again.—Chicago Tribune

When Lightning Strikes a Tree, When a tree is struck by lightning it explodes like overcharged boilers. The flame of the lightning does not burn it up, nor does the electric flash split it like an art. The "bolt" flows throughout into all the damp interstices of the trunk and into the hollows under its bark. All the moisture at once is turned into steam, which, by its immediate explosion, rips open the tree.

Dothan Carriage Co.

Buggies, Runabouts & Surries.

We sell more buggies—from actual count—than any firm in South-East Alabama. Our record shows that we have sold at retail—not including wholesales—a solid carload of buggies in ONE WEEK.

How Do We Do This?

- 1st. We and our connections, buy for SIX LARGE STORES. Quantity enables us to buy right.
- 2nd. We have been in this business (buggies and wagons) for Twenty-five years. Experience has taught us what to buy.
- 3rd. We have the largest stock to select from, variety giving our customers opportunity to select any style or finish.
- 4th. We are exclusive dealers in Buggies, Wagons and Harness and in order to keep your future trade, Our Guarantee Is Right.

Wagons.

We sell the "Mitchell" and the "Tennessee," in our judgment the best, based on experience in handling every make and brand of wagons sold in this section.

We have never known of a "Mitchell Wagon" tire having to be Re-Set.

The "Tennessee," although sold at a Less Price, has a Guarantee that alone will sell it.

Harness

We are on the jobbers list in harness, having been placed there by the amount of goods bought, several years ago. This places us in position to sell at wholesale as well as retail. We would be glad to quote merchants prices at any time and guarantee to save them money.

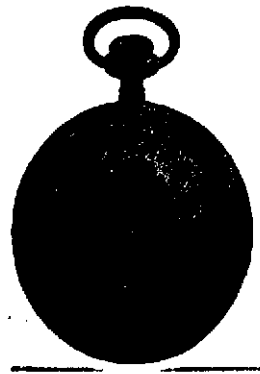

We believe that our Special No. 7 Single Buggy Harness is the best value ever shown in Dothan.

Come to see us in our New Quarters and make yourself thoroughly at home whether you want to buy anything or not, we will always be glad to see you.
